RECOVERS HER BABY. Mother at First Willing to Give It Up Afterwards Wanted It Back.

Through the intervention of Mr. Spencer Clawson, Mabel Gardner and her infant child have been reunited, and the possibility of a court proceeding for the return of the child has been averted.

Shortly after the baby was born, the mother, a domestic in the family of Mr. Clawson, while lying ill at the Holy Cross hospital, sent for Mrs. Anna L. Young of the juvenile court, and asked that her baby be given a home. The infant was given into the care of the mother of the State street orphanage, and was later taken by a family. The foster parents became attached to the child and sought to secure its legal adoption. In the meantime, however, the mother-long yearned for the baby and the sick woman begged for its return. The foster parents at first refused to relinquish the child, but yielded to Mr. Clawson's appeal. The baby was returned to the orphanage and from there taken back to the mother at the hospital.

FUNERAL SERVICES PATRIARCH TAYLOR

President Smith Utters Feeling Tribute—Other Speakers—Sketch of Life of Deceased.

The funeral of Patriarch William Taylor was held Tuesday, May 17, at 11 o'clock in the Big Cottonwood ward house. The congregation in attendance was large and the exercises were very impressive. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, expressing the spirit of peace rather than of mourning.

After opening exercises, including prayer by Elder Willard S. Burton, Bishop Anna Scott bore testimony to the sterling qualities and the integrity of the deceased. Elder Thomas Hull referred to his association with him in the presidency of the Second quorum of Seventy. Elder John W. Taylor alluded to the purity of life and the faithful labors of his uncle William, of his retiring disposition and of his splendid character. Incidents connected with the life of the deceased, his devotion and faithfulness, and said that through the lives of such men who were intimately associated with the Prophet Joseph Smith, he felt that he knew the prophet himself.

PRESIDENT SMITH'S TRIBUTE. President Joseph F. Smith said he could not remember when he first became acquainted with William Taylor, he seemed to have known him all his life. Relating incidents connected with the tragedy at Carthage jail, he recalled the bringing back of President John Taylor in his wounded condition, and paid a glowing tribute to his memory. He said he could have no greater ambition than at the close of his life to have said of him truthfully, as it can be said of John and William Taylor, that he had proved just and true to the faith and had set an example worthy of all men. Referring to their only surviving sister, the last of that line, left—"Aunt Agnes" as she is known—President Smith spoke feelingly and invoked heaven's blessings upon her and upon the posterity of the good man whose body is now about to be laid away.

Brief concluding remarks were made by Bishop Willard S. Burton, under whose direction the services were held, and burial took place in the Big Cottonwood cemetery, the grave being dedicated by John W. Taylor.

OBITUARY SKETCH. William Taylor, who died at his home at 3:30 Friday night, May 13, from disease incident to old age, was born Sept. 2, 1821, in the village of Hale, Westmoreland, England, and was one of a family of eight sons and two daughters. He emigrated with his father's household to Canada in 1829, and lived on a farm on the shores of Lake Ontario. When Parley P. Pratt went to Canada preaching Mormonism in 1829, the Taylor family were his first converts, and soon after they moved to Missouri and later to Illinois. At their home the Prophet Joseph Smith made his famous speech to the bastion for the dead. William Taylor worked with his brother, Elder John Taylor, on the Times and Seasons in Nauvoo, and was a prominent member of the prophet, on more than one occasion guarding and protecting him from his enemies. He started for the west in 1845, having previously married, and arrived in the Salt Lake valley in 1847. He fulfilled a mission to England in 1852-3, and both before he left and after his return he was identified with the militia and took part in several Indian campaigns. He highly prized a commission issued to him by Brigham Young, governor of Utah territory, as second lieutenant of cavalry in the battalion of Life Guards of the Nauvoo Legion, and of the Territorial militia, dated Nov. 20, 1850. He removed to Big Cottonwood in 1852, where he has lived ever since. After the organization of Granite stake he was appointed to special home missionary work, and was ordained a patriarch, he having previously been senior president of the Second quorum of seventy.

His health up to the last had been good except for a little touch of asthma, and he was able to move around comfortably up to the last day of his life. He leaves a wife, five sons and two daughters, besides numerous grandchildren and a large circle of relatives and friends.
